The COVID-19 pandemic is the latest among a long list of crises that have hit the world, revealing our fragilities and the urgent need to rethink our societies. The world is faced with multi-faceted crises, continuously sending mankind signals on the urgent need to take action and embark on a deep transformational process of our societies. Thus, ICESCO launched The « Societies We Want » Initiative to gather diverse voices in various sectors to create a global forum about the world we envision and the societies that we want.

The « Societies We Want » Initiative aims at spreading knowledge and undertaking innovative programs that contribute in building healthy, peaceful, prosperous, inclusive, resilient, and sustainable societies across the Muslim World and beyond.

As Nelson Mandela once said, « Education is the most powerful weapon which you can use to change the world ». Education concerns with forming an individual to build a society. Therefore, it must contribute to changing humanity and strengthen its inner self to bring about a desired society.

Based on its new vision, ICESCO, through its Education and Human and Social Sciences Sectors, hold a webinar on:

The Role of Education in Building The « Societies We Want »

This webinar seeks for dialogue, reflection, and offering various visions and perspectives on the future roles that education must take to build the societies we want.
